SEATONVILLE

Death Of Dr. T. H. Hays—All The Personal And Social News Of Interest.

Seatonville, Sept. 24.—We are having quite a spell of genuine fall weather, which makes us feel good, too, is a little hard on tobacco, some of it is housed; however, we trust the tobacco men will be amply paid for their time, trouble and expense of raising a crop.

Messrs. F. L. and F. C. Jean, K. S. Mills and wife attended the funeral of Dr. T. H. Hays last week, and while your good little paper made mention of his death last week, I feel that it is about time for me to speak of it again. The preacher, Bro. Brainer, did not say so much when he said Dr. Hays had died a Christian the most of his life. He joined the Baptist church when quite a young man. During the last year of his pilgrimage here he united with the First Baptist Church, of which he has been a member, and we are sure that the church has lost a faithful member, which is worth more than anything to the church.

The teacher and children of Seatonville school have decided to ask their friends to meet them at their presence and money next Saturday evening in having a box party. They will help Prismine Brentlinger, Swan Hollingsworth, and others, and have never asked help till now, and will appreciate any aid coming and assisting them. Expect all the school to be there to entertain you. All are invited and welcome at 7:30 Saturday evening.

Mr. Curtis Wheeler and wife, Mr. L. N. Mills of Louisville, and Mr. Wallace Wheeler, of Miami, Florida, were in town Saturday afternoon. They had a little village last Friday afternoon, and took up new ants and took supper with Mr. K. S. Mills and family. Mr. Wheeler returned to his home in Miami Saturday.

Miss Clara Bruce spent the day with Miss Mamie Eldridge recently.

The church was built some thirty years ago and this is the first service of its kind to be held in the house since then. There has been considerable improvement made in the interior of the building and a furnace installed.

Quite a number of improvements will be made, owing to the inability of the owners to find the time and work, but the congregation has done its best to proceed with this special day's service as it had been announced on the public notice.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S TOUCHING TRIBUTE TO MAJOR ARCHIBALD W. BUTT.

Major Archibald W. Butt was one of the heroes of the Titanic. He was President Taft's military aid. After Major Butt's death the president, with tears in his eyes and faltering voice, made him the subject of one of the most beautiful eulogies ever pronounced upon a gallant man, praising his manhood, his courage, his loyalty, his self-sacrifice.

"Everybody knew Archie," said the president. "I cannot go into a box at a theater, I cannot turn around in my room, I cannot go anywhere, without expecting to see his smiling face or to hear his cheerful voice in greeting. The life he lived, the place he chose, his appointments to five with some much closer to him than to all else. The boy was a child and it was a boyish spirit on him on an occasion."

"Archie's character was simple, straightforward and incapable of intrigue. A clear sense of humor lightened his life and those about him. Life was not for him a difficult problem. He was a soldier, and, when he was appointed to serve another, to that other he rendered implicit loyalty. I never knew a man who had so much self-abandonment, as Major Butt."

"Occasions like the sinking of the Titanic frequently develop unloved traits in men. It makes them heroes when you don't expect it. But with Archie it was just as natural for him to help those about him as it was for him to help himself."

"He was on the deck of the Titanic exactly as he was everywhere. He leaves a void with those who loved him, but the circumstances of his going are all that we have had, and, while tears fill the eyes and the voice is choked, we are gratified by the memory of what he was."

Before entering upon military life Major Butt displayed high literary ability. The best of his stories is "Both Sides of the Shield," a splendidly written romance of love and war.

CHAPTER I.

The City Editor's Assignment.

M R. PALMER—You will start for the south tomorrow and write a series of articles on the social, political and social conditions existing in that section. Avoid the cities and large towns, and get your material from the drawn from life. This will be an order from the business office for what money you may receive.

Such were the orders I found one morning on my desk in the city editor's room of a well known Boston newspaper. Of the labor involved in such a task I was not ignorant, mentally he was a giant—I was outwardly calm, but my heart was beating a tattoo inside, for there were few of us who did not fear to stand before that section. Avoid the cities and large towns, and get your material from the drawn from life. This will be an order from the business office for what money you may receive.

As I sat, however, in a businesslike way, as if such assignments were daily occurrences to me:

"I have come to see you about this assignment, sir."

"What assignment?" he asked.

"Oh, you are Palmer, are you?" he said, calmly looking me over through his spectacles. "I thought you were older. I have noticed your work and I saw only a pleasant trip in that part of my country in which I had never traveled. I had been employed on the paper for a comparatively short time—in fact, I had been in journalism only a year. I had been sent away very long when I had taken the advice of an eminent literary man, a friend of my father, and entered journalism as a first stepping stone to literary distinction. The few short stories I had written were not good enough to appeal to me by the mannequins to which I had sent them with a promptness that was calculated to dampen my ardor and otherwise to discourage me. I had been led to believe that my style was exceptional, and that I was not without a keen sense of humor, at the same time possessing a proper appreciation of the pathetic.

I had taken a prize at the high school for an essay, and later, when my parents moved to develop at the university, I was elected to the staff on the editorial staff of one of the monthly periodicals published there. I was chagrined, therefore, when my manuscripts, written legibly on fine lined paper, tied with the best silk ribbon to the best of my ability, failed to form a very poor opinion of our magazines. Possessing an independent fortune, I determined to publish my writings in book form at my own expense. I have sent my manuscripts to a publisher, who has told me that he was, was kind enough to tell me that people did not think much of books published at the author's own expense. Determined at length to get a proper estimate of myself, I sought out an old friend of mine, who had achieved fame by his pen. He recommended my stories and in a ruthless sort of way, as it seemed to me then, told me that some of my ideas were good, but expressed clumsily. He advised me to cease all attempts at literary composition, and to go into the newspaper. "Writing must become a habit with you," he said, "before you can hope to express your thoughts gracefully. What you need most is ease, and if you can attain the pithiness of your writing, you may in time succeed in your ambition." It took me just another six months to make up my mind to follow his advice, and when I did so it was with some degree of humiliation. I disclosed that that friend was not a reporter on the paper, who did not write better than I. Constant application in my new undertaking, however, and the hard work I had done at the university soon brought me my reward. I was being singled out constantly for important local assignments, and I had the pleasure to go to Washington on a delicate mission.

I picked up again the order which lay on my desk and read it over the second time. I thought I saw the earnestness of the man in the room, but no special question was not mentioned. I believed that it was this problem I was to discuss. I had made a suggestion on this line some months before, but the managing editor had not taken kindly to the idea of the paper. There was a read it over again indefinitely, and I started with it to the managing editor's room. As I present ed myself before that austere little cripple—physical, but not mental for

With feverish haste I made ready for my departure. Packing up a few things and putting my writing materials in my grip where I could the more easily get at them. I started for what I still looked upon as the eminence grise of the South.

As I sped south the possibilities of a brilliant future arose before me. When I reached Baltimore I looked down from the window of the car and recalled the scenes enacted there, when my father was one of those stoned to death by a mob of negroes in their country. The day grew rapidly, and as the train pulled into Washington the lofty dome of the capitol, bathed in the fresh light of an April morning, dispelled my resentful thoughts. I led back across the beautiful scenes which were always uppermost in my father's memory whenever he talked of the south and of the friends he had made there after the bitter days of the campaign were over. After leaving Washington every section became of interest to me, and was no detail from which I did not draw some moral. I had determined to pierce the border states and seek for the information I desired from the land where the palmetto, the pine and the live oak grow. The air was full of the windows of the car had been raised and through them came the bracing winds from the Blue Ridge, and I could catch occasionally the strange intonations of the negroes at work in the fields. I was alive to every impression, and I took out my notebook to chain in my memory some of the passing scenes.

That evening I finished my first letter and mailed it from the train.

When I reached Atlanta I made inquiry of the best hotel, and obtained a room in one of the outlying counties where I could study the social and educational conditions of this people out of the beaten tracks and away from the thriving centers through which I had passed, and which, according to my unaccustomed opinions, were the result of northern capital and New England energy. I remained in the vicinity of this city for several days, making journeys into the country and taking notes of the field hands that I could find, the wages paid and the amount of labor performed by the average hand. My test was unabated, and I was on the point of putting all my figures into a letter when my enthusiasm caused me to check that I had omitted to mention any political problems. Study the white people, especially the families of the colored people, and let me know what whatever you write will be copied there. Your letters, therefore, should be just as brief as possible, and if you may be. If you were an artist with the brush I should pay a picture of some of the scenes you have seen in the plantations. As they can't paint, write them as you see. Bring the scenes in God's creation to me, and let me know what they are. They can't paint, they can draw their own conclusions. Let your pictures be of people and animals.

That was all, but it was sufficient to shatter my hopes and discourage all further attempts to make sure of the electoral vote of New England. Discouraged and cast down, I gathered my train that night bound somewhere in a southerly direction—I did not know and I did not care where.

When I awoke the next morning the door which filled every crevice of the rail car was open, and the pine forest of Georgia during my sleep drew up my window and infused great drafts of fresh air. I felt invigorated and ready to carry out my assignment, no matter where it led me, the farther into the pine forests and out of the red soil of the south I went the brighter the better. Later in the day I left the main road and took the narrow gauge line which I was told followed the banks of the Savannah river and passed through several of the most historic counties of the state, rich in mineral wealth, and peopled mainly by remnants of the old colonial and antebellum families, who had in the past made them the most influential centers of the state.

The railroad wound its way through beautiful forests, coast and inland, with places and estates. The white oaks grew up to the very tracks, and the earth seemed carpeted with soft, velvety moss. Through the pine forest I caught glimpses occasionally of stately old residences, with their gardens and lawns, and the trees bearing wild fruit. Where the fence posts had fallen they had been left to decay, but the fields were plowed and showed signs of cultivation at a cost of great labor.

Where the fence posts had fallen they had been left to decay, but the fields were plowed and showed signs of cultivation at a cost of great labor.

And we stopped at several stations, and at each station there was an air of happy anticipation. The little houses were built close together, and the lapidated wooden sheds which stood for depots, and in front of these there was always to be seen some antiquated wagon or carriage. These latter were usually the property of the negroes, who were girls laughing and chattering like a lot of magpies as the train pulled up. They were there presumably to get the mail, but as I thought more likely to exchange bits of gossip and to find out what was "going on" down the line. I was about to get into the station when I heard a noise coming to the station, and I found myself wondering as the train would start again on its slow journey how many of these bright and innocent faces these would be to the next station to greet us. It would indeed take some time, I thought, to get a proper estimate of these people, whose clothes go you the present assignment on account of your work? Have you come to say you are equal to it?"

I was somewhat surprised when I learned that he did not even remember me, but the fact that he had judged me by my work was at least gratifying, so I hurriedly said:

"I feel perfectly able to do the work, but the order appears a little indefinite to me as to time."

Without looking up again, for he had resumed his proofreading, he said:

"Take your own time, but I shall appreciate your doing it to suffice."

"What I want are facts, not discolored, distorted pictures."

He did not even say good morning. Indeed, he seemed to have dismissed me from his mind. With an indifferent air he retired, wondering why the managing editor had given him such official duties to it was more certain.

I was sorry that I had not asked him exactly what he wanted, but on this point I felt reasonably certain, however, for there was to be a presidential election in the following year, and the more I thought of it the more certain I became because my letters were to be used to arouse sentiment in New England against the opposing party and thereby make certain the electoral vote of that section. My work would not only be certain to bring me a good salary, but unusually sure the support of some of the middle western states. My father had been an abolitionist and his father before him. They had been called abolitionists by their neighbors. In this he had been right, for the negroes became the nation's shibboleth.

My father lived to modify many of his ideas, but I refused persistently to modify my views as they had been inculcated into me by my rugged old grandfather.

As I read the order of my assignment over again it seemed to me to be a command to charge the enemy. The old abolition blood was in my veins and was running at high tide.

CUMBERLAND - 30-3, Jeffersontown Ex.

FIRE CITY AND COUNTY SERVICE.

EVEN the justice of the peace fight, sometimes. And at the "temple of justice," too!

THE mid-winter meeting of the Kentucky Press Association will be held at the Seabach Hotel in Louisville December 26 and 27.

WHAT is the difference between a man that is a member of the Fiscal Court and the same man that is a member of a road commission?

We heard on the street the other day of a man who claimed he was too poor to take his home paper, but all the same he read a notice in a city paper that he had borrowed from a neighbor, telling how to prevent a horse from stobbering, and sent one dollar and fifty cents for recipe.
When the one dollar and fifty cents
worth of information came it said:
"Teach your horse how to spit."

A MODERN dude with narrow striped clothes, saddle colored shoes, a loud
necktie, hair parted over his nose,
and smoking a cigarette, addressed
his best girl thus: "If you were me I was you, what would you do?" She hesitatingly said with a smile: "I would take off that hideous tie, put that cigarette in the stove, part my hair on one side, then pray to God
for brains."

AN EXCHANGE says: Small men with small purposes do not help to make a town lively and progressive. The man who never contributes to public enterprise or voluntarily assists in supporting any of the public enterprises is not worth coaxing to remain in town, and should he decide to move out it is a matter of congratulation. It's units and not mere ciphers that count for something.
"Be a unit." This applies to dis-granted church members, also.

GREEN R. KELLER, editor of the Carlisle Mercury, has gone to his reward. In his death the press of the State loses one of its brightest lights;
Kentucky one of her noblest sons; and the world a life that has been worth while. Green Keller's place will be hard to fill, but the influence of his life will go on forever. Never will the editor of The Jeffersonian forget the occasion of the meeting of the R. P. A. at Middlesboro two years ago, when standing in the foothills of the Cumberland mountains Mr. Keller told of the time he fought in the civil war and contrasted that time with the one of the day when the editors enjoyed the dinner as guests of Senator Schwab. That day he was among friends and enjoying life to its fullest extent. Before when he traveled the same route up the mountain blood was streaming from the wounds made by the rocks on his bare feet and good food was unknown.
Many wet eyes were noticed among the large crowd of editors, as their sympathy went out to a grand and noble man, who had in the past, and was then doing so much for his State and country.

THE educational committee of the Louisville Commercial Club is urging the Jefferson County Fiscal Court to employ the government agricultural expert to work among the farmers in this county and instruct them in the way of scientific farming. The word
"scientific" used to scare farmers, but not in this day and time. The tiller of the soil is getting away from the old way of doing things and wants to keep up with all the progressive moves along his line of work.
He wants to do as the lawyer or business man—that is, study the things pertaining to his work and make the best of it. The Fiscal Court can greatly help the farmers of Jefferson county by setting aside $1200 for the purpose of paying one-half the expenses of this farm expert.
The government pays the other half.
A number of other countries in the State have taken advantage of this offer from the government and there is no reason why the best county in the State should not do the same.
Let the Fiscal Court act promptly
upon this important matter.

HERE is a minister who appreciates
the editor. At a recent editorial convention he offered the following toast: "To save an editor from starvation, to give him paper and pay for it promptly; to save him from bankruptcy, advertise in his paper liberally;
to save him from despair, send him
every item of news of which you can get hold; to save him from profanity write your correspondence plainly on one side of the sheet, and send it in as early as possible; to save him from mistakes, bury him. Dead people are the only ones who never make mistakes.

WHEN the county roads are so narrow and large embankments (death-trap) in hundreds of places in Jefferson county, with automobiles flying through the country like birds—the citizens of the county should demand that all these dangerous places be harricaded. Speak to your magistrate about the matter.

FISCAL COURT

Will Be Asked To Foot Half The Expense For Farm
Expert.

TIMES: Confronted with the information that the United States Department of Agriculture will be able to furnish agricultural experts only to eight Kentucky counties this year, the Educational Committee of the Louisville Commercial Club at a meeting Saturday morning decided to put petitions to the Fiscal Court in circulation in Jefferson county at once.
These petitions will urge the experts of a $1,200 appropriation.
This sum is to be paid to the Government the expenses of the expert, while the Christian county has already secured an expert and Daviess and Warren have decided on applications.

PROF. James Speed reported at the meeting that between $3,500 and $4,000 of $9,000 needed had been secured to carry on the rural school development campaign in Kentucky
this year.

By resolution it was declared the second of the Educational Committee that the boys' club at the State Fair was one of the strongest and most vital features. The committee commended the splendid work done by the State Fair in inaugurating this feature. Next year the State Fair management is urged to increase the scope of the work by bringing two boys from each county. Prof.
W. G. McConathy, who has charge of the boys, was given a vote of thanks for devoting a week to their interests.

The Men Who Succeed

AS head of large enterprises are heads of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To fail is to fail, it's better fully to remain in poor weak, run-down, half alive condition
when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order.
"Four bottles did me more real good than any medicine I ever took," writes
Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga.
"After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, strong and healthy. Try them. Only 50 cents at all druggists."

Under Difficulties

"This is something like it," said Young Borgus with satisfaction.

"It's sure is!" agreed Miss Clancy. She shivered at the sound of the sharp back at the lace curtains of the boarding house window. Inside the parlor the gas glared hotly, lighting up the hair wreath above the mantel and glittering on the gaudy vase beneath.

"Now, that it's got warm enough to sit outdoors," pursued young Borgus, stretching his long legs over three steps below him. "I can shake the parlor in there! Gee, but it was fierce last winter never to get a step outside without a cold old woman batting in with 'Excuse me, but I am looking for my crocheted work!' Lovely evening, isn't it, Mr. Borgus?" or glaring at us for being there at all! Or having callers of their own? Nice chance to get a good look carry on that way, could we? I—"

"Oh," said a voice behind them as the screen door cracked, "is some one here? Oh, it's you, Miss Clancy and Mr. Borgus, of course! And just in time for a walk anyhow. Come on, Jimmy!"

"Wouldn't that frost you!" exclaimed young Borgus after they had proceeded a safe distance. "Just wanted to find out what we were talking about! Come on, Jimmy! We're just in time for a walk anyhow. Come on, Jimmy!"

When they got near enough again to see the steps young Borgus gave a low gurgle of triumph. "The steps were empty."

"Come on," he said. "Let's go get some ice cream. Just as sure as we go back there somebody else'll come out!"

In a sympathetic sort of disgust they sought the brilliantly lighted candy store on the corner and found a vacant table.

"Snowballs for me," said Miss paper boy, "just tired before this and a horse! Me, it's fierce, going to see a horse! That hasn't a parlor of her own to entertain company in! We've been around enough by them other boards!"

"Well, we're away from 'em right now," said young Borgus. "Let's make the most of it. I—"

"Why, the idea!" broke in a high-pitched voice at the next table. "If it isn't Miss Clancy! Oh—how do I do, Miss Clancy? This was such a shock infection to the greeting that the speaker appreciated the sentimental situation.

"What's the matter, Miss Blinks?" said Miss Clancy sternly.

"Miss Blinks was forty, dressed like twenty and fondly thought she looked like sixteen. She made eyes at young Borgus, who turned pale. Then she always went places of note and satiated in the vacant chair at their table. "It's so lonesome by myself," she purred apologetically. "I was so thirsty I just had to come out after something cold, but I shrink from going out in the evening unescorted. It's more sociable this way, don't you think?"

"Oh, yes, I agree!" said Miss Clancy with sarcasm that was totally lost.

"Sorry we're just through. We've got an awfully bad time of it."

"Let me slip back and stick some cold poison in her ice cream," growled young Borgus throatily after they had escaped. "She's the limit! Another second and she'd have asked to go walking with us! Let's go down to the little park. It's only a few blocks away!"

He tucked Miss Clancy's hand in the crook of his arm and they walked on with regal, chivalrous strides. It was decided to eat in the dark under the faint echoes of a street piano in the air and automobiles whirring by. Presently their feet crunched the gravel of the walk that ran around the little park and they strolled on till they found a bench that was unoccupied. A blue bush in bloom waved above them.

"Gee!" breathed young Borgus with a vast exhalation of breath signifying peace of mind at last.

He had one hand over Miss Clancy's arm and she did not notice him. Presently he turned his head toward her, but the words on his lips died in that air. A ponderous footed person engorged in alcoholism swayed toward the bench and dropped heavily on it. The other man leered at them. "Bu'f'n night!" he leered at them, pealing.

Young Borgus and Miss Clancy did not speak till they were a block away. "I'm not going to say anything till I go a booz in my pants," young Borgus spoke. "See here," he said, in the desperate tones of a man at bay, "I wasn't going to say anything till I go a booz in my pants, but I'm likely to blow up and reveal a fact people would be interested in. If the goes on much longer! If you can escape along for a while on what I'm getting off I'll speak for a flat tomorrow! Our own parlor—think of it! And our own porch! Will you?"

Miss Clancy wept openly. "Whin' it" she repeated. "Why, it would just be heaven!"—Chicago Daily News.

PREDICT DOOM TO SOCIETY

Time Coming When All Will Be Under the Influence of Ether or Morphine.

Rome—A continuous work by Count Longhena has just been done in Italy; the subject is "State of Society in the Next Century."

As usual, he takes a very pessimistic view and especially of the inhabitants of the United States, who he declares will be under the influence of ether or morphine. He calculates that maddest increases in the States with three times the rapidity of the increase of population, and that this malady will increase for diverse reasons.

He considers that the human brain will become larger, but that the abuse of alcohol will become worse and that this in turn will be abandoned for stimulants of greater power. He predicts a time when all will be under the influence of ether or morphine.

Misery Drives From Home.

Every year, in many parts of the country thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right here with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and breathing troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help against colds, colds, croup, croupy coughs, and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free made to look like new.

What Could He Mean?

The following is said to have happened at one of the numerous grocery stores along the road: A young lady customer asked the polite clerk if he had some good cheese. "Yes, indeed," he replied. "I have some very nice cheese." "It is not correct to call cheese 'cheese,'" she said. "How is that?" he inquired. "Because 'cheese' should be used to qualify only something that is alive." Well, returned the clerk, "I'll stick to 'cheese,' all right."

What We Never Forget

According to science are the things associated with our early home life, such as Buckle's Aronica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold sores. Only 25 cents at all drugstores.

The Time To Eat

The place to eat, the food to eat are three important questions, but they are easily solved at the Blue Grass Dairy Lunch, 223 W. Jefferson, opposite interurban station. Always open, ready to serve you with well-cooked food. Try our home-made pies, excellent fish, vegetables, sandwiches, coffee, etc. Both telephones at your service.

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 21 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says she has been troubled with nervousness for a long time. She tried to get help from doctors to no avail. She turned to Dr. Miles' nerve tonic and she has been greatly relieved.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

He procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles was entirely cured. I have never personally tried it, but I can assure you that it is a great nerve tonic. If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep; if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the world, and if life seems to be a burden to you, then you should take Dr. Miles' nerve tonic.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you. You may not realize what the matter is with you, but that is no reason why you should not get treatment.

Important to Lutherans.

Next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock you are urged to be present at Communion at Christ Lutheran church.

We notice with pleasure that a goodly number of our neighbors received premiums on their fruits, cookery, etc., at the State Fair last week.

A large crowd of sympathizing friends from this community attended the funeral of Dr. Thomas A. Hays, in Louisville, on Tuesday. Dr. Hays was buried here. Father was the name given to his father by those here, which was also the post office. Dr. Hays began the practice of his profession here also, and unlike most boys was not without honor in his own country, for he enjoyed an extensive practice from the very beginning of his career and made friends of all who knew him; friends who loved him to the last. He was a man of ability in his profession—upright, honorable, charitable in his every life. We who knew him best and longest shall miss him most. On behalf of old neighbors I extend their warmest sympathy to the bereaved wife, brother and sisters.
